As a new dawn arrives for the GOP, many Americans agree that Ronald Reagan and his legacy represent the best of America. Elegant, humble, and charismatic, Reagan reshaped conservatism, ushered in a new era of prosperity, and helped spur the end of the Cold War. But what was Reagan like outside the White House? From the infamous Nixon tapes to the current intrigue surrounding Donald Trump's presidential transition, to fictional portrayals like "House of Cards" and "The West Wing," Americans never stop being enamored by what presidents are like when the cameras stop rolling.

Now Reagan insider Peggy Grande offers a fascinating answer to that question in an intimate and touching memoir THE PRESIDENT WILL SEE YOU NOW: My Stories and Lessons from Ronald Reagan's Final Years (Hachette Books, February 21, 2017). Grande was President Reagan's longtime executive assistant who worked closely with him for 10 years after he left the White House from 1989-1999.

Grande started working in the Office of Ronald Reagan while still a college student and quickly earned her way into a coveted role as the president's Executive Assistant. In THE PRESIDENT WILL SEE YOU NOW she reveals what day-to-day life was like in Reagan's California office, including the former president's relationship with the First Lady and his interactions with friends, world leaders, and everyday Americans. She shares never-before-seen photos and intimate stories, from Reagan's love of good Midwestern "comfort food," to how he acquired a piece of the Berlin Wall for The Reagan Library, to the joy he had spending time on his ranch in Santa Barbara. She also writes about the challenges and heartbreak surrounding his Alzheimer's diagnosis in 1994 and his death in 2004.

Peggy Grande worked in the Office of Ronald Reagan in Los Angeles, CA, from 1989-1999. As a keynote speaker to corporate executives, political organizations, executive assistants, and student groups, Grande inspires audiences with timeless Reagan lessons and principles. A graduate of Pepperdine University, she lives in a suburb of Los Angeles, CA, with her husband, her four children, and two dogs, including Mrs. Reagan's dog, Dutchess.
